

Poetry

Journal prompts for week of February 6

1. In your reading this week for other classes and on your own and in conversations you have or hear, find 5 metaphors. List them and briefly explain how they work.
2. Come up with the most outrageously long and elaborate simile that you can. Feel free to try out several in your journal before you decide on one.

Poetry

Journal prompts for week of February 6

1. In your reading this week for other classes and on your own and in conversations you have or hear, find 5 metaphors. List them and briefly explain how they work.
2. Come up with the most outrageously long and elaborate simile that you can. Feel free to try out several in your journal before you decide on one.

Poetry

Journal prompts for week of February 6

1. In your reading this week for other classes and on your own and in conversations you have or hear, find 5 metaphors. List them and briefly explain how they work.
2. Come up with the most outrageously long and elaborate simile that you can. Feel free to try out several in your journal before you decide on one.

Poetry

Journal prompts for week of February 6

1. In your reading this week for other classes and on your own and in conversations you have or hear, find 5 metaphors. List them and briefly explain how they work.
2. Come up with the most outrageously long and elaborate simile that you can. Feel free to try out several in your journal before you decide on one.